COUNCIL MAY ORDER ALL PAVING IN BRICK

Considering Calling Special Meeting to Act in Matter.

NOW HAVE NEW POWER

Recently Enacted Law Makes Consent of Property Owners Unnecessary—Unless Changed Paving to be Crushed Stone and Asphalt.

It is not at all improbable that Bellefonte borough council will order all paving in Allegheny and Bishop Streets to be done in brick instead of crushed stone and asphaltum dressing. If council is not mistaken in its understanding of a law, recently passed by the Legislature and signed by Governor Tener, it has power to arbitrarily say when and how a street shall be paved and need not first have a petition of consent signed by a majority of abutting property owners.

Only a lack of definite information as to just what the new law provides prevented action on Monday night along the line of ordering Allegheny Street, at least, to be paved in brick. Borough Solicitor J. Thomas Mitchell said that he was not familiar with the new law, that he only knew of it in a vague sort of way from reading the newspapers and that he did not care to render opinions based on "newspaper law." He was instructed to inform himself on the subject and meanwhile plans will be shaped up to push the matter through at a special meeting of council.

It will be recalled that the original plans for the State road through Bellefonte included brick paving in Linn, Allegheny and Bishop Streets. A number of Allegheny Street property owners objected to brick, contending that it would result in unnecessary noise. Council thereupon approved a change in the plans, providing for brick in Allegheny Street, between Pike Alley, at Parrish's drug store, and Bishop Street, and crushed stone and asphaltum in Allegheny Street from Pike Alley to Linn Street, and also on the latter street to the borough line. Allegheny Street has been dug up all winter, but thus far nothing has been done toward paving it. It is to shift the plans from crushed stone and asphaltum back to brick before the contractor starts paving in Allegheny Street that council may hold a special meeting.

The new law, under which council purposes acting, does not change the basis of dividing the cost between the property owner and the borough in the matter of street paving. It merely gives to council power to order a street paved, whether abutting property owners agree or not. The property owners in Allegheny Street filed written consent to the paving with crushed stone and asphaltum dressing and pledged themselves to pay their proportionate share. If council orders the paving done in brick it will increase the cost to such property owners about 30 per cent. It will also increase the cost that much to the borough.

Councilman Grimm raised the question whether council might not exceed its power in arbitrarily ordering the paving changed from asphaltum to brick, inasmuch as the old law was in force when the work was begun and was still in force during the period in which the work could and should have been finished. He expressed some doubt as to the right of council to change partly completed plans.

A recent street paving situation, President Harper explained that J. Howard Lingle had called attention to the manner in which the new sidewalk grade was established in Linn Street. The new street grade forced up the sidewalk grade almost two feet in front of the Lingle residence. Where a new sidewalk, recently built in front of the J. K. Barnhart property, next door, there is a sheer drop of 18 inches at the beginning of the Lingle walk. Numerous citizens have urged Mr. Lingle to sue the borough for damages to his property, but he preferred having council consider his case before he might take any action in the matter. President Harper announced that he would refer the matter to the Street Committee, and added:

"I do not think we are liable. If a man builds his house too low, that's his own funeral."

Mr. Lingle says that when the present sidewalk in front of his home was built, it was built at the grade furnished by the late David Butts.

Chairman Judge, of the Street Committee, called attention to the pronounced sentiment among business men and

STILL AT LARGE

Slayer of Dominick Giampicchio May Never be Apprehended.

Carmen Vento, the slayer of Dominick Giampicchio, is still at large and the belief prevails that he will never be apprehended. It is believed that Vento, if he is not already there, will soon be in New York, enroute to Italy. The police have virtually abandoned their efforts to arrest him.

Such information as has leaked out through foreigners, who are the only persons familiar with the killing of Giampicchio, leads to the suggestion that Vento was set upon by several other Italians and that he killed Giampicchio only when he feared that his own life was in danger. Friends of Vento take this view of the matter, claiming that it is supported by the fact that he discharged the shells of a revolver before he stabbed Giampicchio. They also claim that the revolver in question was not owned by the Italian who was stabbed, but was taken from another member of the crowd which attacked Vento.

It is supposed that Vento has been supplied with food and medicine while the injuries to his head were healing and with the $125, drawn from a Bellefonte bank by another Italian on the morning after the stabbing affray, he will soon be heading for his old home in Italy.

BRIDGE ACTION DEFERRED

Project for New Structure in Bellefonte Goes Over Until September.

Although the board of viewers reported in favor of a new bridge over Spring Creek, nearby the Bush House, in Bellefonte, no further action may be taken in the matter until September. A difference of opinion prevailed among lawyers as to when work might be begun. Some contended that favorable recommendation by the grand jury for the May term of court would be all that was necessary and that work could be begun before the end of the present month. Other lawyers, however, contended that such a recommendation could not be made, in any event, before the convening of the grand jury for the September term of court.

Regardless of the difference of opinion on this point, the fact that there was no session of court this week, and no grand jury convened, the matter must necessarily go over until September. Meanwhile exceptions may be filed to the report of the board of viewers. The grand jury for the September term of court will determine whether or not the proposed bridge shall be built.

Close Schools for Few Days.

Children attending the Bellefonte public schools are this week enjoying a little vacation that was not on the program. On Tuesday morning it developed that a pupil in the High School had been ill with what was supposed to be scarlet fever and as a matter of precaution it was decided to close the schools for the remainder of the week. There have been no additional cases of fever reported this week and it is believed that everything will be in readiness to reopen the schools on Monday, next. Manager Brown, of the Scenic theatre, has closed that place of amusement for one week, during which time the building will be thoroughly fumigated. With the precautionary measures taken to prevent any spread of the disease it is thought that it will be but a comparatively short time until the few present cases of illness will have been eradicated.

Old Robbery Cleared Up.

The mystery surrounding the robbery of the merchant tailoring establishment of William Miller, in Philipsburg, on the night of April 14, 1909, was cleared up on Saturday when John Kolozai and his brother Frank, were arrested, the former on the charge of larceny and the latter with receiving stolen goods. Constable Philip Sarony, of Morrisdale, made the arrests. Upward of $600 worth of goods were stolen. A part of the plunder was recovered, having been found in a trunk in the home of Frank Kolozai, at Portage. A heavily laden trunk which John Kolozai shipped from Philipsburg to Portage, was followed and later it was returned empty to Philipsburg. A search warrant was secured and the home of Frank Kolozai, at Portage, examined. There an old trunk was found and in it Mr. Miller found some of his stolen goods.

R., in the Court House, on Tuesday, May 30, at four o'clock. On Sunday morning, May 28th, the members of Bellefonte Post will march to the Reformed church, where they will hear a sermon by Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt.

BEGINS AT 10.30 A. M.

Interesting Program of Exercises Arranged for Occasion—Judges McClure and Baldrige Will be Among Distinguished Visitors.

With the grace of Dr. I. Deal Weather, tomorrow's dedication of the remodeled Court House, in Bellefonte, will prove to be one of the most pleasing and interesting events in the history of Centre County. A large crowd is expected and the program of exercises arranged is one that will be both interesting and instructive. The program, as finally arranged follows:

Invocation, Rev. John Hewitt.

Opening address, Judge Ellis L. Orvis.

Address on behalf of citizens, Dr. Edwin E. Sparks, president of State College.

Historical address, General James A. Beaver.

Address representing the Bar of Centre County, David Fortney.

Short addresses by visiting judges and members of the bar.

Benediction, Rev. Dr. Ezra H. Vocum. As announced last week, the dedication exercises will be held in the Court House, at 10.30 o'clock. Among judges from distant points who have signified their intention to be present are Judge H. M. McClure, of Union County, and Judge Thomas J. Baldrige, of Blair County. Supreme Court Judge Robert von Moschizsker was invited to attend and he endeavored to rearrange previous plans to enable him to be here, only to be compelled yesterday to telegraph his regrets.

NEW STREET LAMPS

Tungsten Lights to Displace Arc Lamps in Part of Allegheny Street.

Bellefonte borough council on Monday night ordered installed a new system of lighting in the business section of Allegheny Street, between Pike Alley, at Parrish's drug store, and Bishop Street. The plan, in brief, displaces the old-style arc lights with Tungsten lamps, so distributed that the streets will be more brilliantly illuminated and at the same time present a more attractive appearance. The additional cost to the borough will be $60 a year, provided the merchants along the street in question bear the cost of the necessary iron poles and the Bellefonte Electric Company makes no charge for the insulation. Council understood that the poles and insulation would be provided in this manner.

The proposed lighting plan will, in fact, be simply an extension of the system used in the diamond in front of the Court House. Tungsten lamps have replaced the old arc light there and now it is proposed installing these lamps as far as Parrish's drug store, on the north side of the diamond, and south as far as Bishop Street. It is proposed placing four Tungsten lamps at the intersection of Allegheny and Bishop Streets, one in the vicinity of Joseph & Co.'s store, one near the post office, one in front of Crider's Exchange, and one on either side of the street at Parrish's drug store. This is the tentative plan for the location of the new lamps, although council directed that they be placed under the supervision of the borough engineer. It was explained that where a merchant was willing to purchase an iron pole the lamp would be placed in front of his store in preference to being placed in front of the store of a merchant unwilling to assume a part of the expense.

Farmers' Institutes.

The County Board of Farmers' Institute Managers will meet at the County Commissioners' office, at the Court House, in Bellefonte, on Tuesday, June 12, to arrange for the places where institutes are to be held this season. All of our people who desire institutes are requested to attend this meeting and present their claims. The board is composed of the local members of the State Board of Agriculture and one representative from each county agricultural society, the Pomona Grange and the County Alliance. Persons unable to attend the meeting are requested to send a letter to John A. Woodward, at Howard, Pa., setting forth their wishes in the matter.

WOMAN SUES BOROUGH FOR $5,000 DAMAGES

Mrs. James Noonan Claims That Amount for Injuries Caused by Fall.

WAS READY TO SETTLE

Borough Council Recently Informed That $500 Would Adjust Matters—Wearied by Frequent Delays She Orders Suit Taken to Court.

After waiting several months in a vain endeavor to effect a settlement out of court, James A. Noonan and his wife, Louisa Noonan, yesterday filed suit in Common Pleas court against Bellefonte borough, claiming $5,000 in damages for injuries sustained by Mrs. Noonan by falling into a hole in the street on November 16, 1910.

It will be recalled that Mrs. Noonan, while walking in Allegheny Street, near Bishop Street, fell into a hole intended to be used in the placing of a telegraph pole. Her injuries were quite painful. Several months ago Bellefonte borough council was notified by Henry C. Quigley, counsel for the Noonans, that unless a settlement for damages could be effected suit would be entered. Council on several occasions considered the matter and from time to time received reports that progress was being made in efforts to settle the case. It was explained that conferences were being held with the Bellefonte Electric Company, looking to a possible division of the damages. At one meeting of council it was reported that Mr. Noonan was willing to settle for $500. Becoming impatient as a result of the failure of council to take any definite action, Mr. Noonan yesterday directed that suit be entered and that the amount claimed for damages be fixed at $5000.

MR LINGLE CONFIDENT

Bellefonte Foundry Plant Will Soon be in Operation.

J. Howard Lingle last week returned from Philadelphia where he had been for the past three months arranging for the manufacture and sale of the brass plumbing specialties of the Central Sanitary Co., and also to arrange for capital to put into operation the Bellefonte Foundry plant. Mr. Lingle has been connected with the Bellefonte Foundry for forty years, during which time the plant has given employment to an average of 100 men daily. He feels confident that the present arrangement will far exceed anything that has been done at this plant in the past.

Edward S. Thompson and Charles V. Haynes, of the firm of Haynes-Thompson Co., of Philadelphia, were in Bellefonte on Friday of last week for the purpose of examining the Bellefonte Foundry plant. This is the firm that have taken the manufacture and sale of the brass plumbing specialties of the Central Sanitary Co. They were very favorably impressed with what they saw here, and it seems certain that the Bellefonte Foundry plant will soon be put into successful operation again and give employment to a large number of men.

Fifth Wife Dead.

While walking in the orchard nearby her home, at Pine Grove Mills, on Saturday, last, Mrs. George Johnson suffered a stroke of paralysis and died the following evening without regaining consciousness. Thus a home is broken up for the fifth time. Deceased was the fifth wife of George Johnson. All five wives now are dead. She was a widow when she married Mr. Johnson about six years ago and was the mother of a large family of boys and girls, most of whom are married. She was a splendid woman and had a host of friends. She was 58 years of age. Funeral services were held on Tuesday at the Johnson home, Rev. R. M. Campbell officiating. The remains were taken to Marysville, near Harrisburg, for interment on Wednesday.

Postal Clerks Praised.

Postal Inspector Landis, of Lancaster, yesterday conducted a case distributing examination at the State College post office. At the close he announced that the examination was the best he had ever conducted in the State. The four clerks examined made a record of which they have every reason to be proud and were warmly praised by Inspector Landis. The grades scored by the four clerks were as follows: George Graham, 100; John Beck, 100; Henry Woerner, 99.74; Ambrose Rice, 99.32. The average grade of the four was 99.785.

FORESTERS TO MEET

Interesting Program for Session at State College, May 24, 25 and 26.

The Pennsylvania Forestry Association will meet at State College on May 24, 25 and 26. This is the first time in the history of the Association that a meeting has been held so far west in the state, and undoubtedly many of the western members and others interested in Forestry work will be present. The meetings will be held in the Auditorium, Agricultural Building and the Forestry Building, but it is quite likely that the majority will be held in the Auditorium, as it is the only place large enough to accommodate the crowd expected. The students will give demonstrations of all phases of the college practicum work, such as forest mapping, packing, nursery work, etc. All meetings and demonstration work will be open to the public.

The following preliminary program will show the topics that will be discussed by members of the Association and other well known speakers:

Address of welcome by Dr. Edwin E. Sparks, president of State College.

Reply by John Birkinbine, president Pennsylvania Forestry Association.

"Reforestation of Waste Land in Germany," illustrated—Dr. Hugh P. Baker, Head of Department of Forestry, State College.

"A Country's Scenery as a Financial Asset," illustrated—Dr. J. W. Harshberger, University of Pennsylvania.

"Some Friends and Foes of the Forest," illustrated—Prof. H. A. Surface, Economic Zoologist of Pennsylvania.

"Relation of Forestry to Agriculture"—Dr. Thomas F. Hunt, State College.

"Private and Municipal Forests in Pennsylvania"—Professor J. A. Ferguson, State College.

"Cooperative Forestry"—Professor W. J. Green, Ohio Experiment Station.

Besley, State Forester of Maryland; Dr. Henry S. Drinker, President of Lehigh University; Dr. William A. Buckhout, State College; Jacob Nolde, on tree planting, etc.

Governor Tener and Dr. H. S. Graves, Forester of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, have been invited to attend.

WARRANTS ISSUED IN LUMBER CUTTING SUIT

Lincoln and William J. Musser Charged With Criminal Trespass

JUSTIFICATION CLAIMED

Dispute Over Length of Time Defendants Were Given to Cut Timber from Tract of Land in Union Twp. Now Owned by Thos. A. Stevens.

An interesting case, involving a charge of criminal trespass was recently heard before Squire Henry D. Brown, in Bellefonte. The prosecutor is Thomas A. Stevens, of Union township, and the defendants are Lincoln and William J. Musser, of Bellefonte, and Frank Dick, Jack Swisher and Peter McCool, employed by the Mussers in cutting timber on land originally owned by Laura N. Peters and now the property of Mr. Stevens. The land is situated in Union township. The question involved in the suits is as to the right of the Mussers to cut out timber purchased by them when the land was owned by Mrs. Peters.

For the prosecution it was contended that the Mussers were originally given two years in which to cut out the timber, and that this time expired before Mr. Stevens purchased the land. By the Mussers it is claimed that they were given five years in which to take out the timber. No timber was cut for several years. Early in the present month the Mussers, with Messrs. Dick, Swisher and McCool, went upon the land and proceeded to cut timber, whereupon Mr. Stevens had warrants issued for their arrest.

At the hearing it was said on behalf of the Musser brothers that they assumed full responsibility for putting their men to work cutting the timber. Squire Brown has reserved his decision, pending further argument by the lawyers on both sides. It is not improbable that the case will be carried into court regardless of how Squire Brown disposes of it.

State Spraying Demonstrations.

Following the public demonstrations in pruning fruit trees, and spraying them for scale insects with the Lime-sulfur Solution in the orchards conducted under the co-operation of the Division of Zoology of the State Department of Agriculture, the work of spraying for such insects as codling moth, curculio, canker worm, bud moth and tent-caterpillar, and the prevention of fungous diseases will now be taken up at this season.

Public meetings will be held in 250 orchards in the State, to which the public is cordially invited. A lecture on the above mentioned pests, giving their life history and best methods of destroying them will be explained, and literature treating on these enemies of the fruit grower distributed free. The local Horticultural inspector will be present, and spray a block of trees.

Demonstration meetings will be held in Centre County as follows:

Thursday, May 25, orchard of J. Elmer Miller, near Madisonburg.

Friday, May 26, orchard of Newton C. Neidigh, near State College.

Saturday, May 27, orchard of Elizabeth D. Green, near Waddle.

Monday, May 29, orchard of Howard T. Struble, near Zion.

Tuesday, May 30, orchard of C. P. Reese, near Snow Shoe.

Wednesday, May 31, orchard of John I. Gray, near Stormstown.

Mrs. James J. Gramley Dead.

Mrs. James J. Gramley, of Madisonburg, died at her late home at that place on Sunday morning, last, at 6.30 o'clock. She had been suffering from diabetes for some time. Deceased was a well known and highly respected resident of Madisonburg and her death is sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends. She was 65 years of age and had spent the greater part of her life in Madisonburg. Surviving are a husband and the following children: Ammon Gramley, of Bellefonte; Mrs. H. M. Bartley, of Lock Haven; Ellis Gramley, of Freeport, Illinois; Joseph Gramley, of Dakota, Illinois; and Mrs. David Bateman, of Elburn, Illinois. Funeral services were held today, at 9 o'clock, from the Madisonburg Reformed church. Interment was made at Madisonburg.

Alabaster Hand

It Was the Cause of a Very
Ludicrous Mistake

By Clarissa Mackie

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

It was a quiet residential street, and it stretched away from the glittering thoroughfare like a dimly lighted tunnel. The long blocks were composed of rather old fashioned red brick dwellings, the more pretentious faced with brownstone.

Lucien Braddock had chosen Blank street as the shortest cut to his apartments in the Circle hotel, which held itself exclusively apart from the avenues, where trains roared above and below the ground and electric cars whizzed on the surface between the two.

On this particular night Lucien traversed the street with unaccustomed haste. The rain fell with slanting, stinging steadiness. The drops drummed on his umbrella and pattered against the smooth surface of his black frock coat. Once or twice he poked his head out from under the umbrella to take a survey of his surroundings. On the second occasion he saw it and stopped short in his tracks to stare up at a lighted parlor window.

Lucien Braddock had heard of beautiful hands, he had read in novels of "marble brows" and "alabaster hands and arms," but in the course of his prosaic existence he had never come across these marks of feminine loveliness. He had seen pretty hands. Some were white, and others were tanned with summer sunshine, but never had he seen a woman's hand that might be likened to the alabaster ones of his novel reading days.

Now he saw it. It was white as snow or marble or the alabaster of his novels; perfect in shape, with small fingers, tapering to a point. For an instant he saw the whole hand; then the woman's other hand was lifted, and the shade was drawn to the sill of the window.

For the first time since he had paused before the window Braddock became aware that he was violating all the rules of politeness. Never before had he stared into a window in this manner, and now he turned hastily and resumed his way through the pelting rain with mingled shame and curiosity.

The recollection of the white hand he had seen impressed him strangely. It had looked so dead white, so lifeless, so rigid, as compared to the careless grace of the woman's other arm as she reached up to pull down the shade. His mind pictured a dozen situations that might account for the peculiar whiteness of the hand. The one which found most favor with him was that the beautiful hand was paralyzed and quite bloodless.

When he arrived at his hotel he dismissed the subject from his mind and went about his evening engagements with his customary vigorous interest.

Every night as he passed through Blank street his eyes involuntarily turned toward the block where stood the house that interested him. It was some time before he could locate the particular house, because it was merely by the mellow lighting of the room or the figure of the woman who had stood there that he might hope to recognize the place once more.

Then came another evening, when he was sauntering homeward with a pleasant anticipation of the excellent dinner that would await his arrival home, there flashed on his view the same picture that he had seen once before on that rainy night. The same woman stood there holding back the rose colored curtains with that dead white hand.

Once more Lucien Braddock paused and stared up at the picture. This time he gazed at the woman's head framed in its mist of dark hair. Her face was in shadow, but he fancied that she must be beautiful, and as she did not stir from her position nor make any attempt to pull down the shade, he was suddenly smitten with a sense of his own rudeness, and with an involuntary removal of his hat, he passed on.

Then it was that a low, amused laugh broke the silence of the street. Lucien stopped and looked around. He could have sworn that the laugh came from the vestibule of the house. The front door was slightly ajar, and through the glass panel a red light shot down upon the sidewalk. With a shrug of the shoulders and an uncomfortable feeling he went on. He felt that he would not let curiosity again tempt him down the length of Blank street. He would walk one more block and traverse another street.

Weeks passed, and Braddock had quite forgotten the incident of the woman with the alabaster hand. Business affairs of unusual importance occupied his attention to the exclusion of amusements, and he found life filled to the brim with action.

When the strain was removed, on the evening of the very day on which he had won the case which was to make him famous among lawyers, he rode home on the electric car and from force of habit dropped off at the corner of Blank street.

He had gone half its length when he was conscious of some disturbance in one of the staid red brick dwellings. A bright light flickered against the windows, and a maidservant stood on the porch screaming hysterically.

Lucien took in the situation at a glance and leaped up the steps and into the house of the woman with the alabaster hand. Just now he had caught a glimpse of her in her customary attitude of graceful negligence leaning forward, one hand holding back silken draperies while the white lace curtains above her head were blazing fiercely.

He passed the servant at a bound, gained the hall and turned into the door that led into the front parlor of the house. As he did so he was conscious that a woman had come swiftly down the stairs and was following closely behind him.

The room was unoccupied save for that strangely unconscious form in the window. Lucien never forgot the quiet elegance of the room, with its rich rugs and tapestried walls, its air of homelike comfort.

It took but an instant to tear down the lace draperies and to trample them under foot. Then he was free to take the form of the lady of the alabaster hand in his arms and carry her to a place of safety.

"Good heavens, madam!" he breathed in her ear as he attempted to draw her away from the window. But she was strangely rigid in his arms, and he felt a little thrill of horror in the discovery that she was quite cold. Indeed, the little white hand that fell coldly upon his was like the fineness of alabaster or its sister—marble.

A low, delicious thrill of laughter broke his momentary hesitation. It did not come from the lady in his arms, but from the girl who had followed him into the room.

He turned and looked at her. She was small and slight, with a pale face crowned with bronze brown hair, but her face was lovely and her eyes the softest brown. She wore the most charming gown of brown velvet that matched her eyes exactly. She was dimpling with laughter when he turned, and she tried to stiffen her features into solemnity as they met.

"I hope you will pardon me—I am so sorry," she faltered. "You have been so very kind and brave to put out the fire, but if you had not said 'madam' it would not seem so funny. Oh, dear!" Again she rippled into laughter.

Lucien looked down at the form he was holding so stiffly in his arms. His eyes widened with amazement, and a sheepish grin overspread his face.

The lady of the alabaster hand stared unwinkingly at him from beautiful eyes fringed with long lashes. Her beautifully arranged dark hair was drawn away from a waxen brow—yes, a waxen face of pink and white perfection! The shimmering fabric of her handsome gown fell limply away from her, and the lace of her sleeve exposed a waxen arm and the perfect alabaster hand!

Gently Lucien Braddock stood the wax figure upright. The lovely alabaster white hands were held stiffly before her. She was very beautiful, but she was made of wax!

"I am so sorry," repeated the girl as Lucien faced about.

"I'm not," he said after a quick glance at her face. "It's one on me though. Ever—I wonder if you would mind telling me why she was standing there in the window?"

"I must explain," said the girl with pretty dignity. "You see, I live with my cousin, Jeanne Goulard. She married M. Goulard of Paris, and after he died she found she was quite poor. So she came back to New York with the loveliest ideas about clothes and opened dressmaking parlors in this house. That is all. You have mistaken the model in one of the front windows for a—a person. We are very grateful to you for your brave deed tonight, sir. You may smile, but the waxen model is very valuable and the gown also."

Lucien laughed heartily at his own discomfort, and the girl joined him with that low contralto laugh which he had heard once before.

"I wonder if you would mind telling me something," he ventured.

"Do you recollect standing in the vestibule of your house several weeks ago and seeing a man asking off his hat to your model?" asked Lucien.

"Yes, indeed! Pardon me, but it was so funny."

This time Lucien joined her in the laugh, and the sound of their mirth brought Mme. Goulard below stairs.

After the whole matter had been explained to her Mme. Goulard introduced her pretty cousin as Miss Ethel Wyndel, and Lucien recollected a classmate at college whose name had been Nick Wyndel, and of course he was Ethel's brother. Lucien was invited to dine with them, and Mme. Goulard insisted that his vis-a-vis might be the lovely model with the alabaster hand.

Then Lucien told his story and related how he had looked from under his umbrella that rainy night to discover the alabaster hand holding back the curtain.

"Oh, that was Ethel's artistic posing," laughed Mme. Goulard. "She admired the hands of that model quite as much as you did, sir. I suppose it was her own arm that reached up and pulled down the shade."

"I shall always have the friendliest feeling for the wax lady," said Lucien earnestly as he bade them good night.

Months afterward, when certain matters of importance had to be settled between Ethel and himself, he protested that her own small hand with its shell pink palm and the diamond glistering on the third finger was the fairest thing in the world.

"Ah, but if it had not been for the lady with the alabaster hand you would never have met me," she reproached him.

"True," he agreed. "Let's have the lady for your bridesmaid."

HANGED AT LEWISTOWN

Mifflin County Has its First Execution—
Hundreds were Present.

Frank Lee was hanged in the yard at the Mifflin county prison at 10.30 o'clock last Thursday morning for the murder of George Porter on the night of November 28, 1908. Slayer and victim were colored.

The scaffold on which Lee was hanged was borrowed from Dauphin county and was such a rarity that hundreds of people from Lewistown and surrounding towns and villages were present to see the instrument of death. Lee was the first man to be hanged in Mifflin county, despite the fact that more than half a score of murders have been committed during the past half century.

Lee, who was a negro of great superstition, came to Lewistown about 12 years ago with a number of other colored men as strike-breakers. His actions soon created the impression that he was wanted elsewhere for a serious crime. He never spoke of his past life.

On the night of November 28, 1908, he engaged in a fight with George Porter, his partner in the garbage business, and procuring his gun kicked open Porter's door and fatally shot the man in the right lung.

In his boyhood Lee claimed he fell from a tree, fracturing his skull, since which time he was "not exactly crazy," as he expressed it at his trial, "but kind o' queer at times." During his trial his friends testified that he would hang his drinking water in the limb of a tree so that ghosts couldn't shed their tears in it.

Died at Tyrone.

Peter Meadville, an old soldier and one of Tyrone's oldest and most highly respected citizens, died at that place on Thursday of last week. Deceased was born near Skelp, Sinking Valley, September 29, 1841, and was aged 69 years, 7 months and 12 days. During the Civil war he entered the service of the United States as a private and was assigned to Company F, 76th Regiment. He was honorably discharged July 9, 1863, on account of disability. He re-enlisted as a private August 7, 1864, in Company A, 205th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and served nine months and sixteen days and was again honorably discharged on the second day of June, 1865. He participated in many battles, prominent among them being Fort Steadman and in front of Petersburg. He was a member of Col. D. M. Jones Post, No. 173, G. A. R.; Union Veteran Legion; Blazing Arrow Tribe of Improved Order of Red Men, and Eagle Eye Tribe of Daughters of Pocahontas. Mr. Meadville was married twice. His first wife, who was Miss Frances H. Haines, of Julian Furnace, died in 1892. He was united in marriage the second time to Miss Elizabeth Calderwood, of Hollidaysburg, who with the following children survive the husband and father's death: Walker Meadville, of Hardy, Nebraska, and Mrs. Alice Reeser, of Winbar. Two daughters, Mrs. Mary Ramey, and Mrs. Bertha Culp have preceded their father to the grave. Two brothers, James G. Meadville, of Roco, Nebraska, and Jacob Meadville, of Altoona, survive.—Tyrone Herald.

Old Legal Document.

Attorney Sidney D. Furst came into the possession of some very old legal documents recently which have never been recorded, says the Lock Haven "Times." In 1821, Sheriff David McMicken, of Lycoming county, (of which we were a part at that time) sold at sheriff's sale seven acres of land in Dunnstown, belonging to John White, to Ezra Riley. Subsequently the property passed through five different hands, the last transfer having been made in 1832. None of the deeds had been recorded in the court house and all were in a good state of preservation.

An interesting coincidence is the fact that one of the deeds was acknowledged before Mr. Furst's son's great great grandfather, Washington Dunn, who was a justice of the peace in the early part of the nineteenth century.

No Kick Coming.

"Col. Bill Sterett was playing poker once in a pretty tough game in Texas," remarked Charles A. Edwards, of Houston, at the Rennett. "Bill knew the company was not select, but he loved draw clearly and it was the only game in the town. He got especially suspicious of one chap who was doing the rawest kind of cheating and finally Bill detected him in the act. He was sore and nudging the fellow who sat next to him, said in an angry and excited undertone, 'Did you see that?'

"See what?" replied the native, carelessly.

"See that skunk deal himself four kings!"

"Wall, suppose he did. Wasn't it his deal?"

BIG REAL ESTATE DEAL

Ten-Acre Farm Near Mill Hall to be Cut into Building Lots.

One of the biggest real estate transactions which has taken place for some time in the vicinity was that last Saturday, when W. H. Stevenson of this city, sold to C. H. Rich and others ten acres of farm land adjoining the pike at the entrance to Mill Hall from this city, says the Lock Haven "Times."

Mr. Rich and the gentlemen interested with him contemplate making the property into a most desirable residential site and plans and specifications have already been prepared for the development of the property. It is intended to double the present width of the pike and leave the trolley track and poles in the centre of the road. Streets will be opened up and operations on five new dwellings begun at once. The houses will have electric light and all conveniences and the trolley company has promised to assist in every way to make the new development as attractive as possible.

Fanny Crosby 91 Years Old.

The ninety-first birthday of Fanny Crosby, the world's most famous hymn writer, was observed at her home church, the First Methodist Church, of Bridgeport, Conn. says the "War Cry." Miss Crosby said in the course of her extended address that she felt that the figures were reversed, and that she was nineteen years old and not ninety-one.

We want to share with our readers the following extracts from Miss Crosby's address:

"What of my record? Has my life during the past year been consecrated to the service of my Lord and Master as it should have been? Have I yielded implicit obedience to His will and followed Him at all times and under all circumstances? Have I sought to rescue the perishing? To speak words of warning to the erring? Have I carefully lifted the tendrils of some lonely vine crushed by the world and left in hopeless despondency? Have I done all that I might have done? Oh, I would that I could say, 'I have walked in all the commandments of the Lord blameless!' But alas! I cannot. But the Lord knows; as Peter once said, 'Lord, Thou knowest all things; Thou knowest that I love Thee!'

"The Lord has done great things for me, whereof I am glad. He has preserved my health, my strength, my intellect. He has renewed the vigor of my youth. He has made me to lie down in green pastures, and led me beside still waters, and amid all my waywardness. He has never left me forsaken. He has covered me with His feathers and under His wings do I trust!"

Death of Hiram Mason.

Hiram Mason, one of Lock Haven's most respected citizens, died at 5 o'clock last Friday, says the Lock Haven "Express." Deceased had been engaged in the manufacture of lumber in South Carolina for several years in company with his son, George, and Robert Easton, of Williamsport. Prior to this he had quite extensively engaged in the same business in this state.

Under the firm name of Ira Mason & Sons they built a large mill in Tanga Scootac in 1864, and operated it for 12 years. After completing this contract the firm was dissolved, the father retired from the lumber business and the sons each engaged with other firms in manufacturing lumber. The subject of this sketch engaged with the firm of Kremer, Mann & Co., of Flemington, for eight years. In all his many years of employment of men he had never had one to strike for shorter hours or for more pay.

Mr. Mason was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He was born in Chemung county, New York, September 4, 1837. In 1861 Mr. Mason was united in marriage to Miss Mary Black, daughter of John Black, of Clinton county. He is survived by his wife and four children, as follows: George, Mrs. Walter Winter and Miss Lola, all of this city, also by one brother, Horace Mason, of Asherville, North Carolina.

SLICKEST GAME OF SEASON

Altoona Firm Victims of Fake Telephone Orders for Groceries.

One of the slickest skin games ever pulled off in the city was consummated on Thursday, last, with Crawford & Davis, the grocers of 1216 Eighth avenue, as the victims. The police are now on the trail of the thief.

A man, described as being tall and slim and wearing a dark suit and cap, went into the pool room on Twelfth street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, and telephoned to the grocery that he was speaking for C. W. Horner's restaurant, across the street from the pool room. He ordered some canned goods, banquet rolls and bananas and told the grocers to fill the order at once.

The order was filled and soon the man came in after it. He seemed to be in a big hurry and hastened out again after loading the goods on his person. A representative of the firm later in the afternoon took the bill to Mr. Horner, proprietor of the restaurant, and presented it. The restaurant owner promptly disclaimed responsibility and a member of the grocery firm at once called the attention of the legal authorities to the swindle that had been worked.—Altoona Tribune.

Lock Haven Moose Growing.

Tuesday evening was a red letter occasion in the history of Lock Haven Lodge No. 100, Loyal Order of Moose, when 75 to 100 members were initiated into the order as a result of the dispensation campaign of Messrs. Greevy and Smith, organizers, who have been working there for a month and who will continue their efforts until July by which time it is expected that Lodge 100 L. O. O. M., will have a larger membership by several hundred than any order in the county. The Williamsport degree team consisting of 24 members, and which has been at Pittsburg and many other places in the state was here to assist in the impressive ceremonies.

In addition to the social side, the local Moose lodge pays sick and death benefits and strives to find employment for its unemployed members, as well as aiding the widows and orphans. Lock Haven Democrat

The "Hoop Sleeve" Now.

The later Parisian fashion freak is the "hoop sleeve." The hoop is placed at the middle of the forearm and its diameter is seven inches. The sleeve is drawn in at wrist and elbow.

The harem skirt was hoisted whenever it appeared publicly in the European capitals and Paris, which ordinarily becomes accustomed quickly to the most fantastic apparel, refused to accept it.

The failure of the garment to appear at the fashionable race course on Sunday aroused wide comment. A few women seeking to attract attention occasionally wear it at a roller rink or in a box at the theatre, but the mass of femininity avoid it, with the possible exception of a few of the milder models, which it is impossible to distinguish from the conventional skirt. The harem skirt is not seen on the streets.

Banker is Pardoned.

The state board of pardons at Harrisburg last week recommended a pardon for William W. Ramsey, a Pittsburg banker, who was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment on indictments found during the municipal investigation in that city a few years ago. Ramsey's sentence would have expired the latter part of this month. He was released from the western penitentiary several hours later.

TURKEY $50 A POUND

National Bird Came High as Result of Law-Suit.

Although it's neither Thanksgiving nor Christmas, turkey ruled at about $50 a pound in the court of common pleas, Thursday, says the Williamsport "Sun." The market touched the high point when the sealed verdict of the jury in the case of Chester C. Peterhoff and his father, Cyrus C. Peterhoff, of Nippenose valley, against John O. Eck, was read. The verdict called for damages in the tidy sum of $500.

Eck was charged with having accused young Peterhoff with having abducted the Eck family gobbler, which Eck admitted on the witness stand had turned up in its master's barn yard after the abduction was supposed to have taken place.

Many of the witnesses gazed attentively at the big map showing the location of the Peterhoff and Eck farms and surrounding properties. The map looked much like the plan of a battle field made by an army engineer. It was large, impressive and pregnant with possibilities. The lawyers, five of them, swapped an eight-foot bamboo pointer about among themselves, while they went over the scene of hostilities and alleged harsh language.

The $500 verdict naturally carries with it a bill of costs and there are attorney fees. The mathematicians that came down from the fertile paradise of the valley weren't sure that the turkey wouldn't run to almost a hundred dollars a pound. When the present whereabouts and the health of the unspeakable turk were asked after one of the defendant's lawyers said he guessed it was trotting about the farm in Nippenose valley ignorant of its consequence in the market.

Golden Eagles Name Officers.

Grand Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, concluded the work of its annual session at Williamsport and adjourned last Thursday. The one important matter decided was that each lodge will decide for itself what benefits to pay. The small town lodges quickly voted down a motion of the Philadelphia delegation to make the benefits uniform for all lodges of the State.

These nominations were made, to be voted for by subordinate lodges: Grand Chief, George R. Gregory, of Harlem; Grand Vice Chief, I. B. Bixler, Harrisburg; Grand High Priest, Rev. C. L. Rice, Williamsport; William McFarland, West Chester; and Miles C. Hafer, Renovo; Grand Trustee, Charles A. Shunk Miller, Lewistown; F. J. Burkhardt, South Bethlehem; Linford Folke, Quakertown; Representative to the Supreme Council, W. Y. Irwin, Chester.

Mrs. Margaret Pearson Dead.

Chester Hill is mourning the death of one of its very best citizens in the demise of Mrs. Margaret Pearson, widow of the late J. A. Pearson, who passed away Monday, May 8, at her home in that place, aged about 67 years. She had for two or three years been in failing health, but her condition assumed a more serious turn about one month ago, and despite the best care and hope of her friends, yielded finally to the grim messenger. The deceased was born in Huntingdon county. Her maiden name was Miss Margaret Green. Shortly after her marriage she came in 1867 with her husband to Phillipsburg, afterwards moving to Chester Hill, where she has long resided. Mr. Pearson passed away some time ago, but surviving are one son and three daughters, viz: McClelland and Miss Myrtle, at home, and Mrs. John McLaughlin and Mrs. Orvis Owens, both of Philadelphia.—Phillipsburg Journal.

"BURGLARS" IN A FURNACE

Small Boys Elude Search of House Until Smoked Out.

"The Mystery of the Furnace" was solved by detectives of the East Fifty-seventh street New York police station. They had been called in to find burglars in the home of Douglas L. Elliman, of 177 East Seventy-first street.

A man told Policeman Manning that he had seen three boys climbing through a basement window of Mr. Elliman's house. Manning had the man stand outside the window and then sent for the reserves. A wagon load of big patrolmen was soon on the scene.

The house was searched from cellar to garret without result. The house was unoccupied and there was no fire in the furnace. Detective McMahon idly swung the door back and put his hand into the opening. "I'll bet there are burglars in here," he said.

Then he felt an arm in the furnace and a leg. The other detectives gathered around the furnace with revolvers drawn. Those within were ordered to come out and a voice issued from the depths:

"Nothin' doin'; come and get us." Then the detectives piled paper in the bottom of the furnace and set it afire. The smoke was too much and, with the aid of the detectives, three boys scrambled out. One was charged with attempted burglary and the others were sent to the Children's society as juvenile delinquents.

ELECTED BISHOPS

Protestant Episcopal Diocese of State Met in Philadelphia.

The Rev. Dr. Philip Mercer Rhinelander, of the faculty of the Episcopal Theological seminary, Cambridge, Mass., was elected bishop co-adjutor and the Rev. Thomas J. Garland of Philadelphia, suffragan bishop, at the one hundred and twenty-seventh annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Pennsylvania held at Philadelphia last week. Dr. Rhinelander was chosen on the second ballot by the clerical delegates. The lay delegates ratified the choice by a vote of 88 to 34.

The Rev. Mr. Garland was chosen suffragan bishop on the first ballot for that office. He received ninety-seven votes in a total of 192. The Rev. Francis M. Taft, of Chester, Pa., received eighty-one votes, the others being scattered among a number of candidates.

Before they are consecrated the election of the new bishops must be concurred in by a majority of the standing committees of the different dioceses in the United States.

The new coadjutor will automatically become bishop of the diocese upon the retirement of Bishop Mackay-Smith, who has tendered his resignation to take effect at the end of the year.

The convention decided to increase the salary of the bishop to $1,000 annually in addition to the Episcopal residence fund, the income from which amounts to about $1,500. The salary of the bishop coadjutor was fixed at $6,300 and that of the bishop suffragan at $5,000.

WARD GETS $1000

"Monte" Favored With Verdict, Which He Regards as Vindication.

Bellefonte friends of John M. Ward, the old base ball player and popularly known here as "Monte", will be interested in a verdict handed down in the New York courts last Friday, whereby Ward was given $1000 in his suit for slander against Ban Johnson, president of the American Baseball League. Ward sued for $50,000. He claims that the verdict is a vindication. The suit was the outcome of a heated controversy some months ago when Ward was a candidate for election as president of the American League.

In commenting on the verdict, Ward said: "That he was vindicated, and added: "That was all I was after. If Johnson had retracted what he said I shouldn't have sued him. I have already said I did not want Johnson's money. What I wanted was to clear my name as a man and a lawyer and I think the verdict has done that. I had more evidence that Johnson, had made these statements and that he had traduced me, but I did not want to call certain friends of mine into the case since I had already more than sufficient evidence against Johnson and was sure of the verdict."

The Court House Dedication.

Tomorrow at 10.30 o'clock the people of Centre County will formally dedicate their remodeled Court House. Exercises appropriate to the occasion have been planned and the event gives promise of being in keeping with what is justly regarded as a public improvement which is without a parallel in Pennsylvania, considering the cost and the physical conditions surrounding the work.

With Judge Orvis and the members of the Centre County bar originated the movement that has resulted in the safeguarding and conserving of what is probably our most valuable piece of county property. Numerous grand juries had earnestly urged the improvements. To all it was quite apparent that the health of those engaged there and the safety of public documents stored in the building demanded repairs without further delay. It was the conviction of many boards of commissioners that it was their duty to make the needed repairs, but one board after another shirked that duty, in each instance fearing to act lest they endangered their political future.

Commissioners Woodring, Zimmerman and Dunlap took the right view of the matter when they decided that the situation was one in which politics or partisanship had no place or interest and that as public servants it was their duty to safeguard, protect and preserve public property. They courageously went to work. The task was a thankless one. For the most part, while the work was in progress, they received everything but the encouragement that should have supported their efforts. Conscious that they were doing their best, which after all is the supreme test of man, they persevered until today sees the work finished and ready for tomorrow's exercises which will formally dedicate a magnificent building to the future uses and needs of the county.

That all who care to may see for themselves how their money has been expended the Court House will be thrown open to the public for a critical, personal inspection of all that is there. Owned by the people, cared for and maintained in their interest, it is the duty of our citizens to not only participate in these dedication exercises but to personally inspect the repairs that have been made. The program provided is one that will be both interesting and instructive. With fair weather prevailing there will be no excuse for the absence of citizens who take pride in the welfare of our county.

No word of praise or indorsement is necessary to those of our citizens who have already displayed sufficient public spirit to see for themselves how well our County Commissioners have performed the work entrusted into their hands. Those who have thus far not taken the trouble to inspect this work have done themselves only an injustice. The work done, the repairs themselves, speak louder than pages of praise or eloquent words of indorsement. The people of Centre County now have a Court House that is an honor to Centre County. As such spirited citizens, and with politics cast aside for the time being, let everybody testify to their pride in works of progress by not only attending tomorrow's dedication but by making themselves a part of it and thus contributing toward its success.

* There was quite a little stir on High Street, near Spring, a day or two ago, when a man and his daughter, from Pittsburgh, showed up in town and came face to face with a young student who is under bail on a serious charge. The presence of the man and his daughter in town was to insist upon an immediate wedding. The young student took to his heels and went into hiding, being enabled to escape by the intervention of several of his friends.

Oil Trust Knocked Out.

From one end of the land to the other the decision of the United States Supreme Court overthrowing the Standard Oil trust is hailed with delight. By the public at large it is regarded as an intercession in their favor by the highest court in the land. The great mass of the people view the death-blow to the monopoly as a just retribution to the trust which has demanded and collected exorbitant prices and stifled competition until it gained absolute control.

And it is a just retribution. For many years the Standard Oil trust has risen as an octopus, extending its tentacles over the land and so firmly manacled smaller concerns that they were compelled to surrender or die from strangulation. Some smaller concerns, believing that this was a free country, put up a brave fight, only to sooner or later succumb to ruinous prices and other like methods resorted to in the general plan to seize and maintain control. In its greed to devour everything in sight the Standard Oil trust did not confine its operations to oil alone. The trust controlled, and by this control wreaked havoc in numerous other fields. Wall Street, the enemy of the masses, has long been under the thumb of the Standard Oil trust. Witness the business panic, forced by Wall Street in a night when the Standard Oil trust sought to be revenged upon Roosevelt. Gripped by the tentacles of the octopus the great railroads responded to the beck and nod of the oil trust. Witness the disclosures in the rebating suits. Large banks and small banks, doing the bidding of Standard Oil, granted favors to some and denied them to others. And so it went all along the line. Where Standard Oil could not gain its point in one way it did it in another. But Standard Oil always gained its point.

It is a homely truth, but a truth nevertheless, that just so far as the pendulum swings one way, just so far will it swing the other direction. The force of this homely truth must today daze the trust magnates who had plundered so long that they had come to believe they could plunder forever. For years they filled their purses from the pockets of the poor. For years they had it in their power to say, and did say, whether others should exist or be snuffed out. For all the years that the masses suffered, for all they have endured, each dollar dishonestly wrung from them by the trust meant but that much more placed on the side of right in the scales of justice. The day of reckoning for some may be delayed, but it comes in the end. The longer it is delayed the greater is the blow when it falls. In the verdict of the United States Supreme Court, dissolving the trust and crying out a stern halt against the restraint of trade, the people triumph, just as they must and shall triumph in every battle for the right.

MANY BILLS VETOED

Gov. Tener Kills, Among Others, One Introduced by Late J. C. Meyer.

Governor Tener, on Friday, last, vetoed a number of bills recently passed by the Legislature. One was that giving lateral railroads the right of eminent domain. It was vetoed because in the judgment of the Governor it was too broad and unrestricted. The bill was introduced by the late J. C. Meyer, of Bellefonte. The Governor vetoed other bills as follows:

Increasing the salaries of the officers and clerks of the Department of Internal Affairs, vetoed because the Governor after careful consideration was "not convinced that the increases authorized by its provisions are justified." The bill was presented in the House on March 13 and carried an increase of $9600.

Charging supervisors with the duty of removing noxious weeds, for the reason that the title was defective.

Giving municipalities power to take fee simple title to land condemned for public use, for the reason that there is no real necessity for such a law.

Validating elections on indebtedness held between April 10, 1905, and May 1, 1909, because it would establish a want of uniformity in law.

Permitting building and loan associations or other corporations whose charters have been wound up to satisfy mortgages, for the reason that the proper method is by judicial procedure.

Bill drawn by City Solicitor of Philadelphia for inspection of weights and measures, because of the approval of a similar and more comprehensive bill.

Bill regulating escheats, for a similar reason.

Bills signed by the Governor were the following:

To enable the United States Government to acquire land in Pennsylvania for the national forest reserve. The act provides that the government may purchase the lands if the approval of the State Water Supply Commission and State Forestry Commission shall be obtained and that if at any future time the State may desire to take over the lands it may do so by reimbursing the government.

STANDARD OIL LOSES

U. S. Supreme Court Renders Decision Dissolving Trust.

The United States Supreme Court, on Monday, last, handed down decisions ordering the dissolution of the Standard Oil trust within the next six months, and holding void the jail sentences imposed in contempt cases on Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, officers of the American Federation of Labor. The court also handed down a decision declaring that corporation officials cannot refuse to produce their books for examination by grand jurors on the plea that they might thereby incriminate themselves. Equally important in its way was still another decision, upholding the federal law requiring railroad companies to equip their trains with safety appliances.

The four decisions are regarded as the most important handed down by the Supreme Court in many years. The Standard Oil trust case has been hanging fire for the last year and has been regarded as one of several clouds upon the business world. Because the decision was delayed it was believed by some that the decision would eventually be in favor of the Standard Oil trust. However, the Supreme Court holds that the Standard Oil trust is a monopoly in restraint of trade and that the holding corporation must be disbanded not later than December 1, next.

Not in the history of the present generation has any case been submitted to the United States Supreme Court which has excited the popular interest and been followed more closely by the public than has attended the battle of the government to overthrow the Standard Oil trust. Years of agitation preceded the consideration of the case by the highest court in the land. In the popular interest surrounding the case John D. Rockefeller, the "Oil King," was held up as the central figure. He and his brother, William Rockefeller, were accepted as the heaviest stockholders in the oil trust, which controlled the oil trade of the country and dictated prices to the consumer.

The government suit to destroy the Standard Oil trust was begun by United States Attorney General Moody on November 15, 1906, who acted at the instigation of President Roosevelt. The holding company in the trust is located in New Jersey. The trust has seventy or more constituent corporations scattered over the country. The main offices of the trust are in New York. The charge filed was that the trust had violated the Sherman anti-trust law. Hearings were had in St. Louis, Chicago, Cleveland, New York and other places. John D. Rockefeller was but one of numerous witnesses examined. The record of testimony taken comprised more than seven millions of words, the largest member of words involved in any previous action in court. The answer of the oil trust was that it had not violated the anti-trust law.

The figures presented in the trial of the case were dazzling to the extreme. It was shown that in seven years the profits of the oil trust had been nearly $500,000,000. In one year alone, the profits of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, just a part of the trust, were $10,000,000 on a capitalization of but $1,000,000. It was the knowledge of the tremendous profits wrung from consumers that fanned the flames of public hostility toward the trust and prompted the people the world over to follow the progress of the case with such close attention.

The exact earnings of the oil trust have never been made public. The trust never issued annual reports and the only insight into its operations was had when the suits were before the courts. It is estimated that the assets of the trust, in plants, properties and money, and which now must be distributed amount to something like $600,000,000. The stock of the trust has been generally regarded as "worth its weight in gold." For many years the stock paid a dividend of 40 a share. In 1900 and 1901 the dividend soared to $48 a share. In 1909 the stock sold on the market for $635. In 1901 the stock was at the high-water mark, $843 a share. On Monday, the day when the death-blow was rendered by the Supreme Court, the stock sold at $679 a share.

others against allowing the Spring Creek bridge, nearby the Bush House, to lie in its present unsightly condition all summer. He added that the Keich-line garage management had threatened suit unless the debris be cleared away, claiming that with one half of the bridge torn up and piles of planks stored at either end of the structure, it was impossible for automobiles to make the sharp turn into Water Street, from High. This contention was laughed at. President Harper suggested that the Street Committee look into the matter and urge the County Commissioners or the York Bridge Company to remove the debris until work may be begun on a new bridge, which cannot be before September at the earliest. All had to finally admit that the County Commissioners were not responsible for the present condition of the bridge, so the borough solicitor was instructed to notify the York Bridge Company to remedy the matter. President Harper, after this had been done, volunteered the explanation that if the York Bridge Company preferred, council would be very glad to attend to the matter and charge up the cost to the company.

Horton S. Ray, proprietor of the Brookhoff House, again appeared before council and asked to be informed where he might dump refuse, other than ashes. As on the occasion of his first visit he received little or no information, members of council explaining their inability to help him. Mr. Judge said that efforts were being made to find a public dumping ground, but the place in mind was quite a distance from town. Council granted a request from citizens to place two Tungsten electric lamps at the intersection of High and Wilson Streets. A concrete sidewalk was ordered placed along the Owens property, in Howard Street, and the same charged to the property.

Last Thursday, the 11th, Mrs. Henry McCracken celebrated her 82nd birthday anniversary at her home in the Glades.

She is quite hale and hearty and has spent all of her life in sight of her birthplace. Her genial husband is but one month her junior, his birthday anniversary falling on June 11th. Aside from a broken hip, from which he has pretty well recovered, he too is in good health and was able to attend church on Sunday last, with the aid of crutches.

Last Saturday, while J. A. B. Miller was burning brush near his barrens dwelling, a waft of wind drove the sparks to the dry leaves nearby, starting one of the fiercest forest fires seen here in many years. Most of old sandy ridge was covered with flames and with a heavy gale blowing from the north the fire soon reached the fences of the White Hall and Fairbrook farms, burning miles of them. The straw in the barnyard of Robert Kossman was on fire several times but fortunately was each time extinguished before it could get a start. Otherwise the damage would have been greater. Mr. Miller and several others had a pretty narrow escape at one stage of the flames, finding themselves surrounded by fire before they were aware of their danger.

Irvin Calhoun passed away at his home, on Wednesday morning, May 10, at 5:30 o'clock, after an illness of but five days, the death being due to pneumonia. Mr. Calhoun was one of our most highly respected citizens. He always had a hearty handshake and pleasant smile for everybody, and in his sudden and sad death we lose one who will be greatly missed by the entire community. Mr. Calhoun had been a cripple for seven years, suffering from a dislocated hip. For 5 or 6 years during that period he was compelled to walk with a crutch. He nevertheless attended to his farm work, never giving up and always being happy and contented with his lot. He often remarked that he felt better at work and that he could not stand being idle. He was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church of this place, always attending the services when it was possible for him to get there. Deceased was born January 7, 1848, making his age 63 years 4 months and 3 days. He is survived by a widow and two sons, George, of Pittsburgh, and Roy, of this place, and also by a brother, Norman Calhoun, of Milroy, and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Miller, of Bedford, and Mrs. J. B. Alexander, of this place. Funeral services were held on Saturday morning, at 10 o'clock, from the Methodist Episcopal church, conducted by Rev. R. S. Oyler. Interment was made in the upper cemetery. The family and friends have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in this sad hour of their bereavement. Rest in peace, brother. DO NOT SPRAY BLOSSOMS

Zoologist Surface Warns Against Spraying Trees in Bloom.

Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist of Pennsylvania, and President of the State Bee-Keepers' Association, issues an important and timely warning against the spraying of trees or plants while in bloom. He says, "It is surprising that there are a few persons who yet speak of spraying blossoms or spraying trees while in bloom. This is a practice that cannot be too strongly condemned. No one should at any time spray trees or plants while in bloom, especially if they expect to produce a crop by so doing."

"Spraying while in bloom not only kills the bees and other insects that are necessary to carry pollen from flower to flower, and thus insures the setting of the fruit, but it is also liable to injure directly the young and delicate fruit itself, and thus result in lessening the crop. Not only this, but it has been proven that effective and satisfactory results in the control of pests cannot be obtained by spraying while in bloom for two reasons: (1) There are no pests that must be treated by spraying at this time; (2) the stamens or treadlike organs in the flower fill the calyx cup to such an extent while in bloom, that the poison does not readily enter the cup, and the Codling moth, which later enters at this place, is not controlled or destroyed so surely as though the spraying were done after the blossoms have withered or fallen."

"The chief pest for which spraying is done shortly after blooming is the Codling moth, which makes the wormy pome fruits, or apples, pears and quinces. For this two pounds of arsenate of lead should be used in each fifty gallons of liquid, whether this be water, or the Bordeaux mixture, or the extra-diluted lime-sulfur solution. To avoid killing the bees, as well as to avoid injury to the blossoms by the action of the spray liquid, and insure the penetration of the liquid to the place where it is needed, the spraying should be done only after the blossoms fall. To insure greater efficiency it can be repeated in about a week or two after the first application."

"We are coming to recognize more and more the importance of the Honey-bee, not only as a producer of a most delicious and healthful food for mankind, but as an essential agency to profitable fruit-growing. Our most extensive and successful orchardists made every effort to keep bees in or near their orchards. There are many kinds of fruits that would not be fructified or fertilized, if they were not planted near other varieties, and if some agency were not effective in carrying the pollen from one to the other. It has been proven that large blocks of almost any kind of fruit are not nearly as productive as are those planted in strips of a few rows each, alternated with other varieties."

"This shows the necessity of mankind co-operating with Nature in providing for the transferring of pollen or flower dust from one blossom to another. It is a very thoughtless person who would spray while in bloom, and thus destroy the most useful adjunct to fruit growing, viz. the bees, in insuring the natural and necessary transmission of pollen."

Fortunately, recent definite legislation in Pennsylvania is provided against the practice of spraying while in bloom. Many reports from various sections of this State of damage to fruit trees from the ravages of the Bud moth are reaching Prof. Surface, and for the benefit of such fruit growers as do not know this pest the following letter of Prof. Surface may be instructive:

"We have received and examined the infested apple shoots which you sent, and find that the larvae or brown worms which they contain are the young of the insect known as the Bud moth (Imetocera ocellana). This is a very common and remarkably destructive insect, which is not often recognized or noticed, and for the remedy of which but little has been said. However it deserves very considerable attention from our fruit growers. Its life history should be understood, and the remedies for it should be applied promptly in the early spring, or, in other words, at this time of year."

"The larvae of the Bud moth passes its winter in the silken tube attached to the twigs of the trees. The little tube can often be seen by persons who watch closely for them. It is my own custom to look for these on my trees when pruning, and pick them off by hand. About the time the buds are opening, the larvae crawl to them and gnaw into them, and enter them as you have observed, where they are especially destructive because they are feeding upon the parts which would otherwise be destined later to develop into growing branches. This terminal growth is destroyed. The leaves are eaten, and because this is done while they are so very young the damage is much greater than though they were older. Later in the year the leaves are held together by silken webs, while the larvae feed between them."

"There are two or three broods per year. This larvae transforms into a little brown cocoon in a cluster of leaves, held together by its webs. From the cocoon comes a little brown and gray moth, which flies, and lays its eggs on other very young and tender bud tips, and the larvae of the next brood live in a similar manner. Thus you can see they really can become very destructive."

"The best remedy is to spray with an arsenical poison. Where many of the little tubes are seen attached to the twigs of apple trees, it is advisable to add two pounds of arsenate of lead to each fifty gallons of the lime-sulfur spray, and apply this about the time the buds are swelling, or commencing to burst. This lime-sulfur spray can be used as strong as for the San Jose scale, and will kill the scale, while the arsenate of lead will kill this pest."

After the leaves are out I recommend spraying with two pounds of arsenate of lead in fifty gallons of the diluted lime-sulfur solution, which becomes a mild contact insecticide, and also a fungicide. To make this, dilute the strong concentrated lime-sulfur, either home-boiled or commercial, with forty times its bulk of water. The best time of year for spraying for the Bud moth is about the time the buds are bursting. One does not need to use the lime-sulfur solution, but can destroy this pest by using two pounds of arsenate of lead in each fifty gallons of water."

In order to combat insect pests successfully, one should know something of the life history, and the following description of the Apple Aphid, contained in a letter by State Zoologist Surface to one of his correspondents, is interesting, since it gives valuable points on the method of treatment of this pest, which is now making its appearance in the orchards of the State.

"We have received the apple cuttings which you sent and find the twigs badly infested with the eggs of the Apple Aphid or plant louse. These eggs are small dark shining objects, which are perceptible to the unaided eye upon close inspection. From them there will hatch, before the end of April, small dark green aphids or plant lice, which are sucking insects, and will commence to feed at once by sinking their long sharp bills into the young leaves, just peeping forth from the buds. They do a great deal of damage, as they poison the leaves, and cause them to become deformed and curled very much out of their original or normal shape."

"Within these curled leaves the plant lice live and thrive very rapidly, giving birth to living young at a rapid rate for many generations. The curled leaves of apple are chiefly due to this cause, and are commonly seen at the time when it is too late to reach the pests within them that have caused the trouble. Two or three years ago the injury to apple trees from this cause amounted to many hundreds of thousands of dollars in this State alone."

"The best remedy to apply is a comparatively mild contact insecticide, such as one pound of whale oil soap in five gallons of water, or two gallons of strong lime-sulfur solution in fifty gallons of water, or a kerosene emulsion containing eight or ten percent kerosene, or a very strong tobacco decoction, made by steeping for two or three hours one-half pound of tobacco in each gallon of water."

"The time of making the application of the spray liquid is very important. To be most effective, this must be after the eggs hatch, which will be now very soon, and before the pests cause the leaves to commence to curl, which will be about the time the blossoms are expanding. If you will examine the trees from which these twigs were taken, you will doubtless see the little dark-colored crawling lice now on the bursting buds. Go ahead and spray them with one of the materials herein mentioned, and you will find a wonderful improvement in the vigor and productiveness of the trees. This is the best time of year of all to destroy these pests."

FARM NEWS AND VIEWS

An Excellent New Potato From a South American Original.

A new species of white potato has for years been cultivated in France from plants found in Uruguay. Originally a very bitter tuber, the South American vegetable becomes, after three or four years of cultivation, an admirable food product. Its yield is enormous and it is exempt from the maladies that attack the ordinary potato. It grows best in moist soils, its native habit being the marshy shores of the River Mercedes, in Uruguay. Its flowers have a jasmine-like odor, and a delicate perfume has already been extracted from them. After one planting the plant perpetuates itself from the broken rootlets left in the soil. The real drawback to this new potato is the strong, peculiar flavor which may sometimes be notified or bred out, but which at present keeps the tubers out of the market.

The Massachusetts Experiment Station has found that the total cost of producing milk satisfactory in sanitary quality and containing from 4 to 5 per cent. of butter fat, will usually amount to from 4 to 5 cents per quart. The cost of keeping a cow for one year is estimated at $137.07. Milk produced under more than average sanitary conditions of certified milk will naturally cost considerably more.

L. Horton, one of the biggest retailers of milk in New York State, is charging 20 cents a quart for some of the milk he sells. This milk is produced by the owner of a farm at Newburgh, N. Y., and cleanliness is insisted on to an extent almost unbelievable. The cows are washed and wiped with spotless linen, and when the milk is obtained it is handled as though it were champagne. The milk is sold to the "gilded rich" in New York City.

The Department of Agriculture is seriously considering the introduction into this country of Bokhara sheep, from which comes the fur called "Persian lamb." All Astrakhan fur is now raised on territory tributary to the Caspian Sea. The best fur is taken from the lamb when it is only four or five days old. The Bokhara sheep also make good mutton.

The report is that mutton-eaters are not getting a square deal from the retail butchers. Sheep are selling at $3.50 to $4 a hundred pounds cheaper now than a year ago, and the wholesale price of mutton has declined proportionately, but the retailers are charging just as much for mutton as they did a year ago.

The Bureau of Animal Industry has developed a sort of equine breakfast food, composed of coconut and peanut meals. A bulletin issued by the Department of Agriculture describes the results obtained by trying the mixture on ten Morgan yearlings and four work horses on the Bureau's horse farm near Middlebury, Vt. At a conclusion of a recent test of this economic diet, the savings in cost were reported $15.75 per ton of mixture.

Coal tar is an excellent remedy for the peach tree borer. Warm it until it is thin enough to spread on a brush, and then cover every particle of the roots of the tree. It keeps out the adult insect, and prevents it from depositing eggs. Neither will tar, paint of any other application of that kind kill the peach tree borers already in the tree. The sharp wire is the only remedy then, and the closest inspection is necessary to find his lair. For the shot-hole borer, apply in June with a long-handled brush, this mixture: Twenty pounds caustic potash, 20 pounds whale oil soap and 60 gallons of water, boiled together two hours.

The silo is not the only way of preventing the usual loss from the corn fields, but it is the only way, and the best way, for preserving the feeding elements of the corn plant. The silo adds nothing to the feeding nutrients. On the other hand, there is a slight loss through fermentation, but it does increase the palatability greatly.

Growers of cabbage plants who have been annoyed by maggot injury to their seed beds will find much to encourage them in Bulletin 334 of the New York Agricultural Station, at Geneva, N. Y. This bulletin summarizes the experience of 11 growers who screened their beds in 1910, and not only escaped maggot and flea-beetle injury, but also had earlier, better plants under the cheese-cloth than they got from seed sown at the same time on unscreened areas alongside. The expense of screening varied from 6 to 20 cents a thousand plants, averaging about 12 cents. The bulletin, like others available at the station, will be sent without charge to those who write for it.

The Missouri Experiment Station has just given out the results of an experiment lasting three years, which shows large profits from feeding hogs on forage crops. The average income per acre from clover forage was $34.11, from rape and oats $23.84, from corn and cowpeas $29.08, and from blue grass $17.71. The estimates are all made on the basis of 60 cents a bushel for the corn fed and 6 cents a pound for the pork produced. The results are important as indicating what may be accomplished when the hogs themselves do all the harvesting. This bulletin, which is numbered 95, was written by Dean F. B. Mumford and C. A. Wilson, and can be had on request by writing to the Director of the Experiment Station, Columbia, Missouri. —Phila. Record.

The bodies so far identified are those of "Lafayette the Great" and two members of his company, Alice Dale, who impersonated the Teddy Bear midget, and Joe Coster. Two bodies are those of members of the orchestra.

Miss Dale and Coster were natives of England. Lafayette was a German. He played for twenty years in the United States. During the past two years he has been in Great Britain presenting at music halls a spectacular "turn" which introduced a horse and dog.

Lafayette had escaped in the first panic when the stage was a mass of flames, but was seen to re-enter the stage door saying:

"I am going to try to get my horse and dog."

When the ruins were examined the actor's charred body was found beside the body of his horse, and a heavy burned timber lay across both man and beast.

The fire started in a mass of scenery used in the conclusion of Lafayette's performance, which was a spectacular military pageant in which he represented Lord Roberts and other celebrities on horseback.

According to some of those who escaped from the rear exits, a trained lion belonging to Lafayette got loose during the panic and blocked the stage door through which the performers were attempting to escape. Lafayette had a desperate struggle with the beast before he got him out of the way.

Lafayette, who was popular and picturesque character, recently finished a season at the largest London halls. He had a residence in London.

Danderine

GROWS HAIR
PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes:
"As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair At Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions).

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes,
25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

FREE To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., CHICAGO, ILL., with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

We wish to express our appreciation of a letter received from W. F. Bitner, one of our valued subscribers at Howard, enclosing a neat one dollar bill to advance his subscription to "The Republican" another year. Here's our thanks, Mr. Bitner, also our assurance that it will be a genuine pleasure to us to continue sending you "The Republican."

Miss Margaret Walsh, daughter of Mrs. John Walsh, departed on Monday for Pittsburg, where she has entered as a nurse in training in the Mercy hospital. The Mercy hospital is one of the most modernly equipped and regarded as one of the best in Pennsylvania. Miss Walsh is especially well adapted for the work which she has undertaken and she enters upon her duties with the best wishes of a host of friends.

Harris Sourbeck, whose fortitude in bearing up under ill health was such as to compel the admiration of all, was brought home from New York yesterday, his condition being anything but improved. For several weeks he underwent treatment in the Orthopedic hospital, in Philadelphia, afterward being removed to New York, where he remained for three weeks. The attending physicians were as last compelled to make the discouraging announcement that they were unable to do anything for him. He died today at 10 o'clock.

Old-time friends of Percy Blackford were glad to see him in town this week. Percy arrived here on Saturday evening for a visit of one week, planning to return in the next day or two to New Castle, where he is engaged in business as a contracting plasterer. In the last few years he had several large contracts, one calling for the plastering of upward of 200 houses. Concluding that he wanted to read a good Centre County newspaper, Percy gave us a call and became enrolled as a subscriber to "The Republican."

John McCoy, who has taken charge of the coal yard, until recently operated by R. B. Taylor, last week received a big string of cars loaded down with some of the finest grades of coal received in Bellefonte in many a day. He has engaged Samuel Sheffer, the well known limestone man, to take charge of the coal yard office. John will give the yard his personal supervision, but will divide his time that he may also manage his coal yard at the McCoy furnace and help his father, Frank McCoy, in the operation of that plant.

Ex-Senator Cyrus E. Woods, of Greensburg, general counsel for the Pittsburg Coal Company, with headquarters in Pittsburg, was a genial and welcome caller at "The Republican" office on Saturday. He was enroute to Boalsburg, where he spent Sunday at the Mrs. John Woods home. During his last few years at Harrisburg he was president of the Senate and proved to be one of the ablest men ever chosen to preside over the upper branch of the Legislature. Senator Woods is a lawyer of prominence and retired from the Senate to become general counsel for the Pittsburg Coal Company. During the last State campaign he was mentioned for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Several nights ago the men employees of the big Joseph Horne store, in Pittsburg, held their annual banquet at the Hotel Lincoln, in that city. Among those who responded to toasts was William T. Spear, an old Bellefonte boy, who for years has been identified with the Joseph Horne store and now holds the very responsible position of adjuster of claims. To fill such a position requires a man of remarkable tact and diplomacy. A department store adjuster must each day pass judgment on hundreds of claims of all kinds originating from all manner of sources. The best evidence that Mr. Spear has been handling the work to the full satisfaction of his employers is the fact that some time ago another large concern made him a tempting offer for his services. When the Joseph Horne management learned of it they made his salary so large that Will couldn't do anything but accept it and remain at the old stand.

David Miller is the representative of Bellefonte Lodge, No. 153, I. O. O. F., to the convention of the Grand Lodge, being held this week at Wilkes-Barre.

Laundryman Frank Kern caught a 13-1/2 inch California trout, in Spring Creek, nearby the Central Railroad of Pennsylvania, on Tuesday afternoon.

Dr. and Mrs. George B. Klump, at one time residents of Bellefonte, greeted friends here on Tuesday, returning to their home in Williamsport on Wednesday.

Andy McNitt, of the firm of Huyett & McNitt, has joined the ranks of the automobilists. On Friday of last week he purchased from George A. Beezer a 36-horse power Parry runabout. The car will be thoroughly overhauled and repainted and will be ready for its initial spin to Waddle station in about ten days.

J. Will Conley, of the John Meese store, desires it announced that the young man who is ill from scarlet fever has not been employed at the store for the last three weeks. Following the hearing and disposal of a petty case before Squire Brown a day or two ago, in which the principals were two boys, mixed up in an assault and battery squabble, the Squire announced that all actions of a like nature in the future would result in his sending the offenders to the house of refuge for juveniles. In the past it has been customary to merely impose a fine and costs.

William Resides, of Unionville, familiarly known by a host of friends as "Uncle Billy," accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Julia L. Bell, of Clearfield, visited last week with Edward Grist, formerly of Unionville, but now living in Philipsburg. Mr. Resides has a fine war record. He lost an arm at the battle of Fredericksburg and has the distinction of being the first man to cross the pontoon bridge, at Fredericksburg, carrying with him the Stars and Stripes.

Somehow or other Clayt. Brown and Joe Thal seem to have the knack of catching trout where others can catch nothing but a cold. One morning last week Clayt landed three beautiful trout at the Yeager swing factory, the largest of which measured 20-1/4 inches. On the same morning, and in the same dam, Joe Thal caught a basket of big trout, the largest measuring over 19 inches. For several days a trout, measuring probably about 15 inches, has been lying under the Spring Creek bridge, nearby the wall, on the opposite side of the stream from the Bush House. Fishermen, experts and all other brands, have been on the job day and night, with all manner of tempting flies, minnows, grasshoppers, etc., but the old trout has evidently been through many a campaign, for thus far he has refused to touch anything containing a hook.

Lawyer Samuel D. Gettig last week attended the annual session of the Grand Castle, Knights of Golden Eagle, held at Williamsport. He participated in the session as representative of the Bellefonte lodge.

District Attorney W. Groh Runkle, who had been laid up with a severe attack of grip, was this week able to return to his office. Although still a little bit shaky, "Billy" says that he is on the road to recovery and that a few days more will see him back into his old-time form.

Walter C. Bowes, of Howard, is one of our new subscribers enrolled this week. Mr. Bowes may make up his mind right now that whenever there is anything doing in the news line he will get it in "The Republican." He is the type of reader who appreciates our efforts to publish home news for home readers. We are very glad to place him on our list.

Furst P. Crider, whose green houses and flower gardens below Howard have won no end of praise from visitors, this week became enrolled as a regular reader of "The Republican." Furst not only knows how to grow the choicest flowers and plants to be had anywhere, but he also knows a good newspaper when he sees it. That's why he subscribed for "The Republican."

Music dealer, M. C. Gephart, whose name stands for everything musical, has an advertisement in another column that we commend to every reader of "The Republican." Mr. Gephart not only handles the best of everything in his line, but he is a home dealer—two all important factors which should guide you when you consider where to place your order.

This is the season of the year when window screens are about the most important article about the house. Finkelstine's store in the Aiken block, has them, from 20 cents to 35 cents; also low prices on screen doors. At this store special prices have been arranged for one week, as may be understood more fully by examining the advertisements in other parts of "The Republican." Persons desiring to save money these days will find lots of opportunity to do so by visiting the Finkelstine 5, 10 and 25 cent store.

Samuel E. Kline, the well known and successful farmer near Blanchard, is due to have his Democratic views considerably ruffled during the year to come, for he this week became enrolled as a regular reader of "The Republican." Samuel is pretty nearly as good a Democrat as he is a farmer and that is one good reason why we are sorry to see him on the other side of the political fence. A good antidote for any dyed-in-the-wool Democrat is a yearly subscription to "The Republican." He may still be a Democrat at the end of the year, but he is certain to know more about his party by that time than would be the case if he confined his reading to Democratic newspapers.

A wireless despatch from Pine Grove Mills relates a novel tale of applying modern methods in the chicken-raising line. It seems that J. Homer Decker, the efficient assistant clerk to the County Commissioners, recently conceived the idea of raising blue blooded chickens. With considerable care he selected 104 eggs, each guaranteed to hatch out a chicken with a family tree. Picking out some nice, motherly old hens, Homer gave them full charge of the eggs. Sure enough, in due time there were 104 little chickens hatched out and Homer was correspondingly happy. He took no little pride in explaining to the neighbors that his chickens were of a strictly high-toned brand. For a time this excited quite a lot of envy among owners of the common type of chicken, that is only good for laying eggs and winding up at a chicken and waffle supper. From the first, however, it appeared that the 104 little chicks had no appetite. The most tempting food to be obtained was placed before them, but they apparently were unwilling to eat. One neighbor after another volunteered a suggestion as to how the trouble might be overcome, but each remedy failed. Finally a nearby farmer, who had done a lot of thinking about the high-toned feature of the chickens, of which possibly 80 or more were still living, hit upon a novel scheme. "I'll tell you what's the matter," said he to Homer, "you can't expect such high-toned chickens to eat without napkins. Next time you go to Bellefonte drop around to Finkelstine's store and buy some chicken napkins." Just what Homer said in reply will never be known, the wireless system having collapsed at that particular stage of the despatch.

Hon. Sidney A. Foster,
Sec. R. U. M. L. Ins. CO.,
Des Moines, Ia.

Boone, Iowa, Nov. 5, 1907.

My Dear Sir:

I have your favor of November 2nd stating that my policy for $1,000 issued by your company is now full paid and I may take a full paid participating policy for the amount of my original policy, $1,000, and receive in cash the surplus, $428, or take guaranteed cash value, $575, and in addition cash surplus, $428, making a total cash value of $1,003, or I may take a full paid policy for $1650. I have paid in premium $735.20, leaving me a profit of $267.80.

This is very satisfactory to me, and fully justifies the confidence which I had twenty years ago in the then new Iowa company organized by Iowa men, and it is a pleasure to know that the same men continue to manage its affairs. I hereby elect to take a full participating policy and my cash surplus, believing that the participating policy payable at my death is a good investment and absolutely safe.

Hoping for your continued success, I am,
Yours respectfully,
